

Tarot Timing Information Chart

Timing in the tarot can be a tricky topic. But successfully identifying when something will happen is invaluable. The symbolic structure of the deck offers a framework on which to hang a multitude of coherent timing systems. Unless your deck already has clear timing indicators, finding the system that works for you is the first step in determining correct timing.

There are many ways to tell time with the tarot. For example, classical interpretations of the elements provide a speed for each suit, a simple determination of whether something happens sooner or later. The traditional Golden Dawn correspondences propose planetary and zodiacal associations, resulting in the assignment of days of the week and dates of the year. More confusingly, various analogies for the suits lead us through an array of contradictory seasonal systems. For instance, the suits align with the seasons via the start of the season, the cardinal signs. This gives us Aries/Wands/fire for spring, Cancer/Cups/water for summer, etc. But the Pages are allotted the quadrants of the year, and as such each Page represents the fixed signs or fullness of the season: Taurus/Page of Pentacles/earth for spring, Leo/Page of Wands/fire for summer, and so on.

The truth is that no system is perfect. The best technique for getting accurate timing in the tarot is to pick one system and stick to it — while being open to intuitional nudges. As a case in point, my sense of the Pages is that they are too young, and so indicate that it's not time yet. This Tarot Timing Information Chart is a compilation of the systems that work for me, plus the nudges that have been consistently correct. I offer this in the hope that you will find accurate answers to your timing questions.
